

Questions for Intro:

1. Are 3 topics of review clear?

Yes, note taking, college students, and lecture comprehension are all there.

2. Is topic shown to be important to college students?

Yes, we all need to take notes.

3. Are there 2 or less citations? Are the citations correct?

The first one may not be necessary, considering that the first source is then cited again just after. Otherwise, looks good.

4. Is there a good flow of ideas? A good connection between trend 1 and intro?

The flow from 'difficulty in keeping up' to usage of AI transcription is done well.

5. Is there NO overlap between intro and trend 1?

Correct.

6. Is gap statement ABSENT?

It is absent.

Peer review questions trends 1 and 2:

1. Topic sentence explains topic studied but no results/ or positive- negative spin? Check for each paragraph!

i. Theme 1: the topic could be a bit more precise. "There has been a focus" ==> who is doing the focusing, and through what medium (probably studies)?

2. 3 sources are present? Check for each paragraph!

i. Theme 1: the first and second sources are told as if they're the same source, with the first sentence giving the context of the study and the second giving the results. It may be beneficial to clarify that they are two separate studies. The first study also lacks results, it just says that a study was held. On second look, I see that the second study did not focus on neurodivergent students, however that was not the clearest.

ii. Theme 2: similarly, the first source cited only says that a study was held. The second source seems to give its results, but in that case they together should be one citation.

3. 3 sources have some mix of purpose of study/ methods/ results/ explanation?

i. Theme 1: the first two sources might overlap a bit too much, but it's nothing unacceptable. The third source could be a bit more connected to the other two, just by eg. pointing out that "... due to taking notes more efficiently, for example by using ai notes..."

ii. Theme 2: the sources do provide a good spread.

4. 3 sources have good in-text citation (google it if you need to)? Google: in text citations in AIP IEEE APA chicago etc

i. Citations are done correctly

5. Concluding sentence summarizes or explains results/ implications of studies (consensus or not)?
Check for each paragraph!
 - i. Theme 1: concluding sentence seems heavily weighted towards the third study. Maybe mention that it actually does increase their understanding, not merely confidence.
 - ii. Theme 2: I think that the concluding sentence could be improved some by including a little specific information about the effects / deficiencies of AI.
6. Connections/ transitions between studies weave studies together to tell a story (ex: X supports Y, X explains Y, X disagrees with Y). Not a stack of studies (not simple furthermore, in addition, etc). Are there any places where connections could be better? Tell your peer.
 - i. Theme 1: I see the story, although it could be signposted a bit more clearly.
 - ii. Theme 2: the story is a little less clear, for example the connection between overreliance and hallucinations is a little fuzzy.
7. Is there a good connection phrase between the 2 trend paragraphs. Should be at the beginning of paragraph 2. (Another topic that is being debated....)
 - i. Transition is effective.
8. Do the 2 paragraphs they overlap in topic/focus or studies? They should not.
 - i. They go in completely different directions. Good!
9. Are all the studies in each paragraph about the same topic/ subtopic?
 - i. They are.

B. Next, review gap paragraphs

Gap paragraph:

Is there:

1. Transition from trend 2

Yes, the first sentence.

2. Summary of known from lit review ~1 sentence

Yes, the second sentence.

3. Transition Switch to Info about what is not known, not yet studied, mismatches between your proposed study and the studies in review. You need 2 gaps or limitations. (Do not mention your new study here though)

Two gaps are present.

4. Does gap match with proposed study?- Or put another way does proposed study fill the gap. Check the comment that your partner left about their project.

They match very closely.

5. Will the last sentence in the paragraph flow well into the transition in the next section which says something like " to address this gap..."

It does.
